Self-evaluation instructions

General idea: Your self-evaluation and the instructor's adjustment must be based on both (i) your understanding demonstrated by your exercises and (ii) your ability to analyze other students' exercises.

Evaluation partner: If you are in a two-person group, exchange your exercises. If you are in a three-person group, rotate your exercises so that each one of you has someone else's exercise to analyze.

For each subquestion of this problem,

- Analyze your partner's answer with respect to (i) completeness (i.e., whether responding to all the questions/instructions) and (ii) correctness.
Note that you must have analyzed Comprehensive Exercises with respect performance goals on your Take-Home Exercises Evaluation Form.
- Interview your partner and analyze whether s/he indeed understands what is written.
- Write your analysis on your evaluation form.
- Your analysis must primarily refer to your partner's written answer and her/his understanding with respect to the written answer. If your partner demonstrates understanding beyond or less than what is written, note the difference. Since you will be on both sides of this process, when you do the exercises, you must try your best so that other students in class can understand your writing.
- In the past evaluations, many students wrote their answers were similar, even though they are actually different. Such a statement cannot be taken as a demonstration of strong analytical skills.

Note: Your critical analysis of your partner's answer will be part of your evaluation, but not part of your partner's evaluation. Thus, it will be your best interest to be as critical as possible. In order for you to do this without potentially hurting your partner's feeling, you are requested not to show your self-evaluation forms to other students during/after the workshop. Only the instructor will cross-reference your analyses.
